

HIDDEN TREASURES

Explore high up and down low to spot all of these hidden Pitt Rivers Museum treasures. Some are small, some are hiding, and some are in dark corners of the museum...

1

Did you know you can open most of the drawers in the museum?! This one is tucked away in drawer C.61.1. Pull it open and see what's inside...

This hot cross bun is 40 years old and was made by one of the museum staff. It is believed that if you bake a hot cross bun before 12 noon on Good Friday it will last forever!

Can you spot any other treasures in these drawers?

2

This is a tiny one and you will have to look closely to spot it! This frog amulet is a lucky charm.

Clue: Look out for red eyes!

What does this charm protect against?

Number 3 you will never see! There are skulls hidden away inside this box.

What would you hide inside this box? Draw it in the box below.

Court (Ground Floor)

4 Hidden away behind a curtain you will find a Hawaiian feather cloak. Push the button for a light to help you see it. The yellow feathers were taken from a bird that is mostly black. The bird is not killed but is released back into the wild to make sure there are still plenty of birds to pluck the feathers from.

How many bird feathers do you think were used to make it? _____

5 You may have never spotted these before. They are hidden low down under a case so keep your eyes peeled! These two sections used to be part of a pavement in Oxford, they were found underneath an old house.

What is the pavement made from?

6 This one is in the dark and to find it might be quite hard. Crouch down and look underneath, you may even want to use a torch to help you to see!

This claw is from a TV story 'The Curse of the Claw'. It is about a boy called Kevin who receives the claw as a gift from his Uncle Jack. The claw is from The Naga Hills (India) and Jack warns Kevin that if he doesn't return it before his 60th birthday the curse of the claw will kill him!

7 You may not even notice the Buddha's eyes peeking out at you through the doors and windows. It's hiding away in this Mongolian temple.

Draw what you think he might look like here.

Now it's your turn to find your own hidden object. Take a look around and find something hidden away. Tell us what it is, why you chose it, and draw a picture of it here.
